I would like to create a view in which I can store different types of documents (Strings, Integers, Booleans), based on my previous question - How to store a variable length string in couchdb with python?. I currently am storing them in different views, i.e. StringView, IntegerView, BooleanView. How can I dynamically switch between views? A: You could either code up your own view or use existing python objects to satisfy the CouchDB view requirements. I don't think there's anything built-in. What you could do is to define a dictionary containing those views, and key on type: views = {'str': StringView, 'int': IntegerView, 'bool': BooleanView} def bar(type): return [views[key] for key in views] This code would return your views based on the value of bar("str"), then you can use that to do whatever you want. Obviously this doesn't store multiple views in the same document. Somatotopic organization of afferent input to the cerebral cortex in the cat. The somatotopic organization of the central representation of the proximal and distal forelimb and hindlimb in the somatic and ventral posteromedial nuclei (VPM) was studied in cats by placing unanesthetized restrained animals in a stereotaxic frame and recording the activity in the forelimb (N = 25), hindlimb (N = 15) and torso (N = 15) in response to peripheral electrical stimulation.
