The Bachelor (series 9) The ninth series of The Bachelor was the ninth series of The Bachelor reality television show, featuring Chris Soules. It is the first series in which a phone line has been provided for the participants to call each other after the show airs. The series began broadcasting in Australia on Network Ten on 12 May 2017, and ran for four weeks. With the exception of season 12, all The Bachelor Australia/New Zealand seasons have shown a single episode per week. The winner of this series, Ashley Cain, became the show's third female winner. Cain and Soules were married on 28 February 2018 in a ceremony held on Soules' property in South Dakota. This is the first season since season 5 that did not have a season finale. The two-hour season finale aired on 23 June 2017. Chris Sam and Heather M. received the most nominations. Cast Contestants Future appearances The Bachelor Australia: 2016 The Bachelor Australia: 2017 Couples Significant other(s) eliminated contestants Chris revealed to Sam that he was not happy. He also stated that he wanted to try again with Heather, but Sam said it was their decision. During the first boot in the first week, Summer told Lacey that she could not see a future with her. During the second boot, Lacey told Chris that she was hoping to find love and that she deserved a second chance. During the second boot in the first week, Logan was challenged to complete a bucket list in the next six days. If he did not complete at least two items, Summer would choose someone else at the end of the night. However, both Chris and Summer were annoyed and kept him around. The two then realised that having a partner is what they needed to be happy. Logan left after the second boot in the second week. During the third boot, Lacey told Chris that she had changed her mind and that she wanted to save Sam for a long time. She also stated that Sam was a good person who deserved to find love. Sam revealed 648931e174

The citywide assessment effort to identify and develop green and sustainable improvements in its 533-acre park system has been launched, according to the city. The program, dubbed the System Greening Assessment and Innovation Project, or System GAIP, is “aimed at helping us take a comprehensive look at the park system and make it greener, more sustainable and more visitor-friendly,” said Jane D’Amico, the city’s acting director of Parks, Recreation and Cultural Activities. The city is aiming to get more visitors, residents and employees to enjoy the park system and to reduce the burden on taxpayers and the environment by improving and expanding the system, she added. As of now, approximately 230 park sites in the city are potential candidates for inclusion in the park system greening project, D’Amico said. “We’ve mapped potential System GAIP sites throughout the city and will identify specific locations that should undergo the needed improvements or expansions,” she added. The greening project will also provide park system operators with information on cost-saving or revenue-generating elements that they can include in their operations, D’Amico said. But
